

JERSEY COAST IS
WRECKED BY GALE

Sea Bright, N. J., Is Damaged Past Recovery It Is Feared by Force of the Waves

SUMMER COTTAGES STREW BEACH

Homes of Wealthy Vacationers Are Crushed and Their Wreckage Saves the Town

SEA BRIGHT, N. J., Jan. 5.—Five lives are known to be lost and more than $1,000,000 in damage has been done by the storm which has raged from Portland, Me., to Norfolk, Va., since Saturday.

The New Jersey coast has suffered the greatest damage, but with the shifting of the wind from the north-east to due north Sunday afternoon, the high water which threatened to wash away thousands of houses on the New Jersey coast, was partly removed. At almost every point the rain has changed to snow and the temperature has dropped many degrees.

Cottages Wrecked
All along the shore near Sea Bright costly cottages litter the beach and the sands are strewn with furniture, antiques and house decorations of all sorts.

The loss to summer cottages will be so great that the impression is strong this section of the coast will never entirely recover from the blow. Not in thirty years has such a storm struck this coast.

All night long scores of watchmen, their smoky lanterns bobbing through the dark patrolled the beach. When heavy wet snow began to fall the wind died down considerably. When, shortly after 2 a. m. the dreaded hour of high tide came the fury of the waters was so allayed that comparatively little further damage was done.

Scores Suffer
More than fifty miles along the Jersey and Long Island coasts felt the fury of the storm and throughout all that part of the coast scores of families suffered today as a severe wind swept in snow from the sea.

To aid in the work of cleaning up the debris of the storm even the school children of the town were impressed into service today. All the schools were closed and the sturdy of the boys toiled with their fathers in an effort to prepare for further trouble which is sure to come if the wind rises and the sea again runs high. All along the water front the timbers are piled high while among them motorboats and fishing smacks are hauled up high and dry ready for use if the necessity arises. Thousands of strangers are in the town today and fully 25,000 were here yesterday to view the scene of desolation.

Only the wreckage of the Octagon hotel and of half a score of big cottages which collapsed early in the storm, it is declared today prevented the destruction of the town. Piled up on the beach, their wreckage broke the force of the seas and prevented their sweeping inward with more disastrous effect.

Million Damage
NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—About $1,000,000 damage was the estimate today of the sea havoc brought in the last forty-eight hours along the coast in the neighborhood of New York. In the dockways more than $200,000 was lost through the fury of the sea; at Coney Island more than $100,000 was swallowed up, and at Arverne, Edgemere and Hammells an equal loss was sustained.

FEDERALS ESCAPE
TIGHTENING NOOSE

Rebels Leave Gap in Their Battle Front and Orozco Seizes Opportunity to Turn Tables

MAKES SORTIE WITH GREAT EFFECT

Gets Upon Flank of Rebels as They Change Base and Brightens Ojinaga's Chances

PRESIDIO, Texas, Jan. 5.—Twenty-five hundred federals under personal command of General Ynez Salazar sallied forth from Ojinaga at midnight Sunday and attacked General Ortega's rebel force as it was maneuvering to join General Rodriguez' command west of Ojinaga. The battle between the opposing forces raged from four to six miles from Ojinaga from that hour and at daylight still continued, with the federals having a distinct advantage.

Pursuers Chased
After the attack, Ortega's main body drove the federals back towards Ojinaga. General Orozco, who had remained at Ojinaga, rushed 800 reinforcements to his assistance. This turned the tide. Salazar immediately checked his retreat and from being pursued became pursuer. For the first time since the battle of Ojinaga began seven days ago the federals became aggressive. The rebels were driven from nearly every point of vantage gained last week by their fierce onslaughts and great loss of life.

Why the rebels, in changing their base, left such an unprotected gap in their battle front is not understood by military men here. The federal commanders, seeing the gap, seized the opportunity to get into the open and escape from the pestilence ridden city of Ojinaga. All indications today are that their judgment was good.

600 Killed, 1,000 Hurt

Estimates today, based on the most conservative statements obtainable from federal and rebel wounded place the losses on both sides during the seven days' fighting at 600 killed and 1,000 wounded. Of the dead about 350 are federals.

Three more smallpox cases were reported Sunday night and wounded, coming in for treatment insist that the disease is epidemic among the federals at Ojinaga. Red Cross physicians are apprehensive that more smallpox victims will attempt to cross.

Girl Thought Victim of White Slavers Washed Up On Coney Island

IDENTIFIED BY HER JEWELRY

Was Last Seen December 4 and Mystery Surrounds Her Death

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The body of Miss Jessie E. McCann, the young settlement worker who disappeared from her Brooklyn home just a month ago, was given up by the sea on Sunday. It was found by a watchman shortly after daybreak at Coney Island, having been washed ashore by the heavy surf that pounded the beach during the night's storm.

Identified by Ring
Long immersion had made the features unrecognizable, but identification of the young woman by her family was made possible by a signet ring with the initials "J. E. M." and by articles of clothing. Miss McCann wore the day she disappeared. Miss McCann was last seen by her family when she left her home on Dec. 4, supposedly to attend to settlement work duties. A few days later her father, a well to do business man, notified the police of her disappearance and offered a reward of $1,000 for information as to her whereabouts.

Shown in Movies
He also had her photograph thrown on the screens of moving picture theaters throughout the east in the hope this would lead to the finding of the young woman. Numerous reports of Miss McCann having been seen came from all parts of the country, but investigation in each case proved them to be erroneous. There were no signs of violence on the body, according to physicians who examined it, and the police have no clue as to the manner in which she was drowned.

Ford Company Cuts Hours of Men and Will Split Half Its Earnings Among Them

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 5.—Announcement was made today by the Ford Motor company of Detroit, of a profit sharing scheme by which $10,000,000—approximately half the earnings of the giant concern—will be distributed annually to its employees. At the same time it was announced that the working day for the men would be cut one hour, with no decrease in pay, and that four thousand new employees would be added to the company's working force immediately, making a total of 22,000 men affected. The cutting of one hour from the working day means that the men will work only eight hours a day. Three shifts will be employed.

The distribution of the surplus will start one week from today. Under the terms of the plan the company announced no employ of twenty-two years of age or over will receive less than five dollars for an eight hour day, even though he be merely a floor sweeper. The minimum wage for employees is now $2.34 for a nine hour day.

In connection with the launching of the profit sharing plan, the Ford company has organized a sociological department which will keep close watch on the manner of living of all employees and those found to be using their extra money in any improper manner will immediately cease to be beneficiaries under the plan.

Sixty Day Sentence Given Man for Pretending to Be Member of La Crosse Police Force

WHY WAS THE BRIBE GIVEN?

Court Wanted to Know Why Hazel Winters was Bluffed Into Giving Stranger Money

Louis Wittenberg, aged 23, 929 Island street, alleged pseudo detective and the man who, it is said, tried to get "easy money" by scaring former local resort keepers, was this morning sentenced to serve sixty days in the county jail or pay a fine of $50 and costs.

Wittenberg, it was testified before County Judge John Brindley today, by posing as a detective working under authority from Police Chief John Weber, threatened to arrest Hazel Winters unless she gave him twenty-five dollars to "keep mum."

The Winters woman testified that she gave him five dollars to "catch him" but admitted that it was not until some time after the alleged extortion that she notified her attorney. She testified that even then she didn't tell the police but that they learned of the affair through Frank Withrow, her lawyer.

Notorious Characters
"Hazel Winters," her husband, Frank Bessellbach, and Frankie La Salle were the principal witnesses against Wittenberg. Both women are former resort keepers and Frankie La Salle is at present under bonds not to run a disorderly house. She was recently prosecuted under the Linley law.

The Winters woman on the stand was vehement in her declarations that she has been running a boarding house and told of how Wittenberg had represented himself as a detective and demanded money.

"What I don't understand is why you gave him the money?" said Judge Brindley.

Wanted "to Catch Him"
"I gave it to him to catch him," replied the Winters woman. "I knew if he was working for Weber he wasn't the kind of a detective we wanted in La Crosse and if he was a grafter, I could catch him by giving him the money."

Wittenberg denied that he had used extortion to get the five but insisted that he had entered the house and was approached by a "young girl." He did not accept her overtures, he said, and then conceived the idea of frightening the Winters woman.

He testified that he accused her of running a disorderly house and that she gave him five dollars to say nothing.

The woman denied the presence of a "young girl."

STRANGER ROBS
TRUSTING RUBE

Helrud Is Minus Watch, Ring and Two Coats as Result of Faith in Chance Acquaintance

OFFERED USE OF HIS ROOM

Had Carried Stock Buyer's Grips from North Side and Had Enjoyed Few Drinks with Him

An affable stranger, a few drinks and too much faith in new acquaintances were the undoing of C. J. Helrud, aged 46, Rushford, Minn., a stock buyer, who is today mourning the loss of his watch, ring, overcoat and suit coat.

Today the police are searching for the pleasant "pleasant young fellow" who kindly offered to assist Helrud carry his grips from the north to the south sides, and who, after a few drinks, "generously" offered the use of his room to Helrud during his stay in the city.

Helrud tells the police that he got off a train at the north side shortly after 8 o'clock last night and started to walk to the south side, crossing the causeway he was overtaken by the young man who helped him carry his bags.

Had Few Drinks

"We had a few drinks when we got to the south side," said Helrud to the police, "and he offered to let me use his room while I was in La Crosse. He said he wasn't going to use it and that I might as well occupy it."

"I told him that I wasn't ready to go to bed yet, but he said he would show me where it was and I could go to it any time I wanted to."

From Helrud's story it was learned that the stranger enticed him to a spot near the old tannery at the foot of Badger street, and knocked him down.

"Give me your money!" Helrud was ordered.

Compromised on Watch

Helrud was short of money and the stranger compromised by taking his watch, ring and overcoat. He then compelled him to take off his suit coat and trade for the rather shabby affair worn by the stranger.

"Now you keep your mouth shut," admonished the stranger. "If you peep of this to the police I'll kill you."

He calmly walked northward leaving Helrud to gather his rather scattered senses.

No trace of the friendly stranger has been found.

Thirty-two Drown When Tank Steamer Sinks in Heavy Sea Off Atlantic Coast

RESCUE SHIPS GET ONLY EIGHT

Captain and Seven of Men Are Dragged More Dead Than Alive from the Sinking Vessel

ENGINES DEAD BEFORE HELP CAME

Ship Was Unable to Guide Rescuers to Spot Where She Wallowed in the Waves

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Thirty-two men are believed to have perished when the American line tank steamer, Oklahoma, went down sixty miles off Sandy Hook in the terrific storm which swept the Jersey coast yesterday and last night, according to late reports received in shipping circles today. Captain Alfred Gunter and seven members of the crew were rescued early today by the Hamburg-American liner Bavaria, but all of the others were apparently lost.

Long Unknown

Throughout last night liners and revenue cutters endeavoring to aid the stricken vessel could not even learn the name of the tank steamer. During the morning she was identified as the Oklahoma, although earlier reports had given her name as the Waska.

The Bavaria was bound from Philadelphia to Boston. At the Hamburg-American offices it was stated that she did not usually put in at New York, but might come in with the survivors of the Oklahoma's crew.

Saved at Seven

A wireless from the Bavaria stated that the eight men were taken from the Oklahoma at 7 a. m. today. After giving the list of rescued, it added:

"The rest of the crew of thirty-two apparently went down with the after part of the ship."

"The accident happened Sunday at 7 o'clock."

The Bavaria headed an entire fleet of rescue ships. The Manuel Calvo of the Spanish line remained on the scene, instead of proceeding as first reported. The United Fruit liner Lenadores also stood by, as well as the White Star freighter Georgie and the revenue cutter Seneca. A terrific sea was running. Lifeboats were dashed to pieces as they were lowered over the sides, and many members of the rescue ships' crews were injured.

The Oklahoma was owned by the J. M. Gaffney Petroleum company. She sailed from New York Saturday for Port Arthur. Soon after the Bavaria made the rescue, Captain Daniels of the Caribbean, which was expected to be of some aid to the Oklahoma wireless that he was sixty miles south of Ambrose Light and had just heard that "an unknown steamer" had rescued the crew of the Waska. As Daniels previously had been unable to learn the name of the stricken ship, it was considered certain that he referred to the Oklahoma rescue.

Seas Crash Boats

Time after time the Manuel Calvo and other vessels endeavored to lower lifeboats. The heavy seas hit the light crafts as they struck the water, hurled them back and crushed them against the sides of the rescue ships.

Members of the crew who had volunteered for the perilous work were dragged, bruised and bleeding to the decks. The brilliant searchlights played upon the Oklahoma and eight men could be seen huddled on the forepart of the vessel. As each great wave struck the crippled vessel, she rolled in the trough and it seemed that she would surely go to the bottom with the next assault of the water.

All night long the fight, which seemed hopeless, was kept up by the.

FISKE O'HARA

Fiske O'Hara, with his superb voice and engaging personality, will be the central figure of the splendid company that is booked to present Augustus Pitou's latest play, "In Old Dublin," at La Crosse theater on Tuesday, January 13. The big tenor, with his handsome face and stalwart figure, makes an ideal hero in the comedy romance which the veteran author has written for him and it is said that never before has he been so happily fitted with a play. The character of Neil Powers, the young boat designer, fits him like a glove and his excellent training, gained in stock dramatic productions, serves him in good stead when the dainty love scenes with the charming Rose Stratton are portrayed. "In Old Dublin" is a tense, interesting play throughout. The picturesque life of the Irish aristocracy and peasantry is depicted with the utmost fidelity and the rare wit that has made the Celt so famous, scintillates in every scene of it. Mr. O'Hara has a new budget of catching melodies which he sings with his usual magnetic style.

The Return of Blood Eruptions

No Reason Why Anyone Should Suffer Such Disheartening Experience.

No case of poisoned blood is ever cured until the last destructive germ has been eliminated from the system. And the only remedy that is assimilated in the tissues and stimulates cellular activity to overcome harmful poisons is the famous blood purifier, S. S. S.

The skin is but a fine network of tiny blood vessels, and the specific action of S. S. S. is declared by eminent authorities to be a pronounced stimulation of the activity of these cells.

The reason for this is in the peculiar action of S. S. S. which enables the cells in the skin to select from the blood the nutrient it requires for regeneration.

Not only this, but if from the presence of some disturbing poison there is a local or general interference of nutrition to cause boils, carbuncles, abscesses and kidney troubles, S. S. S. so directs the local cells that the poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

This fact has been demonstrated year in and year out in a wonderful number of cases of severe skin eruption that had seemed to be incurable.

S. S. S. can be obtained at any well stocked drug store, if you insist upon it, but be sure you are not talked into something "just as good."

S. S. S. is prepared by the Swift Specific Co., 215 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

WHO HAD THE SIXTH

By JANE OSBORN
Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Martin Jones was an Owl. He belonged to the most exclusive secret society at Stanton whose official title was the Order of Owls. It is a great thing to be elected to membership of this society. It means that after you leave college you can wear the small enameled pin on your waistcoat—not too conspicuously but just where it may show when you take out your watch. It means that when you see another Owl anywhere in your wanderings you can impart to him through some secret pressures and intricacies of your handshake that you are a socially desirable as he. It means too that when you meet a pretty girl that as soon as you can conveniently let fall the fact that you are a Stanton Owl, she will immediately open her deep blue or broyn eyes a little wider and smile a little more graciously. If by chance you fall a victim to these smiles it means that you can delight her simple heart by asking her to wear your Owl pin for you.

Now, Martin Jones had been out of Stanton college for ten years and he had discovered that here and there in the business and social world there were unknown men and women who were ignorant of the value of Owl membership, that sometimes in his work as a lawyer a man needed to know more of his ability than simply the fact that he was an Owl, and that sometimes even an old and seasoned Owl himself did not take him into the bosom of his family, simply because he was an Owl. But one illusion of Martin's undergraduate days respecting Owls remained intact. That was the value of Owl membership among the pretty girls he happened to meet. They would always put Martin up two or three pegs when they saw his pin.

The result of this was that on several occasions Martin had in a moment of unreflecting enthusiasm parted with an Owl pin as a pledge of his affections. There were always more at headquarters that could be bought upon application from a member.

One morning when Martin was opening his mail in his small bachelor apartment shared by his chum and another Owl from Stanton, he came across a notice from headquarters of the Owl society.

"Another holdup from the Owls," said Martin glancing at the envelope. "I sent a check for a hundred last year. I suppose they want me to help them building a landing place for flying machines now. Honest, Tom, a man might as well be paying alimony as to be an Owl."

"If you'd look at the notice you wouldn't kick so hard," said Tom. "I got one of those notices this morning, too. It isn't a holdup. It's about that new rule. Owls can't give their pins away to girls any more unless they are engaged or married. One or two of the men have been reckless about it, but the new rule says that all outstanding pins have got to come in on penalty of a heavy fine. The records tell just how many each man has bought, and now they will have to swear that they are either lost or in proper hands. It's a good rule, but, of course, it doesn't hit us. It's only some of those girl crazy Johnnies they have been taking in lately that would give their pins to a girl."

Martin blinked rapidly at Tom, and then looked at him sharply to see that he was serious. "Yes, of course, mighty fine rule," he said. "No, it wouldn't hit you or me. It is a sort of nuisance to have to swear you lost all you have ordered, though."

"I don't see why," returned Tom. "If you have lost them you've lost them and that's all there is about it. No one would ever pawn an Owl pin. They aren't worth enough."

"No, of course not. If you've lost them it is all right," Martin had opened his notice and a special slip dropped out with the statement from headquarters notifying Martin that he would have to account for six pins which from time to time he had received from headquarters. "I must have lost a good many," he said to Tom. "I ought to have had one of those patent fasteners put on mine."

When Martin came back from his office that night to spend the evening with Tom he had a memorandum in his pocket that ran thus:

"One, I am wearing. Two, I gave my sister to make Maud Dawson jealous. Write for it. Three, I gave to Maud Dawson to get even with my sister. Write for it. Four, I gave the little brunette in Rome when I was abroad. Good as lost. Five, I gave Julie Vere de Vere. After we quarreled I gave it to Vivien Larocque. She threw it away when she found Julie's initials on the back. Good as lost. Six, I gave to —. Forget her name. Ask Tom."

At dinner Tom suggested to Martin that they while away the time at a new play, but Martin hesitated. "I have one or two letters I want to write tonight, Tom. I ought to write to my sister, for one."

An hour later Martin was still sitting idly smoking with Tom. "If you're going to write those letters," said Tom, "you might do it."

"Yes, I expect to presently," Martin drawled. "Say, by the way, I was just thinking what a great time we had that year we went to Maine; never saw such sailing."

"What about it?" said Tom, somewhat annoyed at the pointlessness of Martin's remark.

"Oh, I was just speaking to a client today about—cat boats. About how long was that boat we had, would you say?"

"Give it up," muttered Tom, reading. "Nice girls there were, too," said Martin, with a studied mood of reminiscence. "By the way, what did they call that little one—pretty girl—played the mandolin—lives in the city during the winter?"

"A nice time to ask," said Tom, dropping his book. "After you rushed her like mad for a month and then came back and never gave her another thought."

"Not so bad as that," protested Martin. "I did think a great deal of her, but not of her name. Besides, it was just after I got back to the city that I was sent abroad, you recollect."

Molly Played Better Than Before.

Daddy's Bedtime

Molly's Story — Successful Piano Recital.

"MOLLY had a face like a little round moon," began daddy. "It was just as round as it could be, and her hair, which was curly all around her face, made her look still more like a moon; also she had a big mouth and smiled a great deal. Molly was very musical, and ever since she had been a little girl, so little that she had to be lifted to the piano stool, she had been able to play anything she heard."

"Her family were far from being well off, but they strove to give Molly a musical education. So every afternoon Molly went to a conservatory of music. She would carry her little music case with her and eagerly await the time for her music teacher to be ready for her. She always was ahead of time for her lesson."

"One day it was decided that Molly was so talented she could give a concert. So the evening for the concert was decided upon. Molly practiced and practiced the pieces she was to play."

"Molly had a special dress made for the occasion of white silk with a pink sash and a pink bow to match to tie around her hair. All the children were more excited than Molly herself and whispered: 'Oh, I'm so glad I'm not Molly!' 'I should think she'd be so frightened!' 'Oh, I couldn't play a note with so many people listening to me!'"

"But Molly was not at all nervous. She was very proud of her pretty new dress, for she had never had a really new dress before. She had always had to have the dresses of her older sisters cut down and made smaller for her. And Molly, too, wanted to please her teacher and do her best for his sake."

"When Molly walked on the stage she was applauded by all her little friends. She loved the lights and the faces of her friends in the audience, and she played better than she ever had before. When she was through her recital her friends presented her with a basket of yellow roses."

"Unknown to her, Molly's teacher had invited an old friend of his to the concert. This gentleman was very rich and fond of music. He liked to help along any one he felt deserved it. He was so delighted with Molly's playing that he rushed up to the little girl, saying: 'I shall send you and your mother to Germany. There you'll have the finest music teachers in the world. You will come back making us all very proud of you.'"

"You can imagine how happy it made Molly, who had worked hard to be worthy of her family's struggles to give her lessons. But perhaps most of all it pleased her old teacher, who prayed that he might live to see his little pupil come back as a wonderful concert player."

PROMISE OF A SPLENDID YEAR

We were proud of our New Year's number—not because it was an especially great paper, but because it told some very encouraging things about La Crosse.

For instance, Mr. Thompson's report showed that real estate transactions in 1913 exceeded those of 1912 by more than a half million dollars, and that city mortgages in 1913 decreased over $60,000 from the 1912 figures. Outside the city the decrease in mortgages from 1912 records is still greater, totalling about $80,000.

This substantial reduction of debts, together with the flattering increase in real estate dealings, is a splendid index to the prosperity of this community. People have not only been able to pay off a large portion of indebtedness, but they have had money with which to make investments.

No doubt many people who had paid no more than passing attention, were surprised at the sweeping record of changes in Main street. These changes are substantial, and they have done much to improve our leading business thoroughfare, at once giving it a more metropolitan aspect and adding to the scope of its activities.

Turning to page six, we find in the telegraphic dispatches a column of optimistic telegrams about the strong business movement throughout the country, showing that general conditions conform to our satisfactory situation at home.

Really, it was a most cheerful New Year's number.

A TRIBUTE TO EARL M. ROGERS

The death of Gen. Earl M. Rogers ended a long and useful life.

Few Wisconsin soldiers served longer, and none was in a greater number of battles, which included all of those in which the army of the Potomac participated except those on the river early in 1862. He rose from the ranks to brevet major on his merits, as one of the bravest soldiers in the Iron brigade, of which he was a member throughout its four years of service.

Soon after the war he was transferred to the regular army on his record as a volunteer soldier. But a wound received at Petersburg in 1864 forced him to abandon a career for which he was eminently fitted.

In civil life Gen. Rogers' good citizenship and marked usefulness in many directions added to creditable public service in a number of official stations, long ago placed him in the ranks of well known men throughout the state, and he was as popular as he was well known.

A war hero, a high type American citizen, a genuine patriot and a noble Christian gentleman has thus left the ranks of the living.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

SAME OLD SOPHISTRY FED TO THE PUBLIC

Our old friend, The Sentinel, which by suggesting negatives to its own conclusions affords us so much pleasant inspiration along militantly political lines, thus takes President Wilson to task:

"The postmaster general's theoretical endorsement of government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines decidedly outruns the party platform and principle. 'That document (exact fealty to which is a cardinal article with Mr. Bryan) declares for efficient supervision and rate regulation' of those services."

The Madison State Journal, which anathematizes everything for which the Sentinel stands, publishes this at least inferential criticism of President Wilson's treatment of the telephone and telegraph situation:

"Another trust has been busted. 'President Wilson considers that his administration has won a tremendous victory over predatory wealth—because the Bell Telephone company has agreed to sell the Western Union Telegraph company. 'Whom will they sell it to?' 'Will the rates on telegrams be lowered? THEY WILL NOT. 'Will telephone rates be reduced? THEY WILL NOT. 'Will the employees of the Western Union have their wages increased by this great victory?' No. 'Will the employees of the telephone company have their wages raised as a result of this victory?' No."

"Will the working conditions of the people employed by either the Western Union, the Postal or the Bell companies be improved? Decidedly not. 'Who has won a great victory, Mr. President?'"

And there you have it. "Between the devil and the deep sea" with "the devil" amuck and the tide rising.

And, by way of argument, back we go to the inconclusive statement that some other nations have failed to successfully operate their own lines. Always it is the cost of operation to the taxpayers that is played up, never the direct saving to the patrons of the utilities.

We are asked to believe that the government certainly will lose money in the operation of business enterprises through which private individuals have piled up fabulous fortunes.

While we relish the news that this country has witnessed the beginning of the end of interlocking directorates, the country needs something sounder and more reassuring than newspaper stories of documentary victories of the government over private monopoly. Government regulation is but a coaling station on the road to government ownership. It is not absurd to believe that individual genius and integrity can become official. And when that happens, dollars will give way to service as the paramount purpose of the public utility.

"LOOKING FORWARD WITH CONFIDENCE"

"President Wilson deserves the warmest congratulations on the success of his efforts to revise the currency law of the nation. Just what the effect will be only experience will show. But everyone, even the bankers, appear to be looking forward to the future with confidence."—Marquette Eagle-Star (Stephenson Tory).

"Even the bankers"—isn't the Eagle-Star the artless sheet? How can a modicum of confidence in the new currency law survive the class of endorsement it is getting?

NOT "SIGNS OF THE TIMES"

Why not start the new year off in better form by removing a few signs of ancient utility which are to be seen about town. For instance the B. P. O. E. 300 which has remained two years over time at the old stand. Also one "POULTRY SHOW" which projects into space from the old Y. M. C. A. building.

A Pennsylvania miner put dynamite in his neighbor's coffee. Perhaps he heard him complain that it had been too weak.

St. Louis is eating "imitation lemon" pies made of turnips and citric acid. We prefer to pass our share out to the tramp.

"It costs thirty-nine cents to distribute $1 worth of food in New York." And fifty cents more for the tip.

Embarrassment of Riches

What varied topics tempt me as I muse—
What odd stunts daily decorate the news!
For him who must each day indite a rhyme
Earth's population is, I swear, a boon!

I often think: 'Suppose the world got sane—
I'd seek for subjects for my songs in vain'
(And if the world were sane, I hear one say,
My songs would lack for readers day by day.)

But time is passing, on yon printer's face
I read a glowering tale of unfiled space.
Daily he cries in bitter accents: "Bill,
You lack a half a column yet to fill!"
Therefore, make haste! From out the themes that throng
Select, O Muse, one subject for your song.

Some clever thought on Eggs, or Mexico,
On Spugs, or Christmas, or some current show;
Some witty thing on Mrs. Pankhurst, or
The deathless theme of Heat and Janitor;

Some rhymes on Graft, or Prunes, or Distaphones,
Men, Higher Up, Bald Heads, or Unpaid Loans;
Umbrellas that Men Steal, the Wife that Flirts,
High Cost of Living, Bills, the Latest Skirts;

The Wild Piano in the Flat Above, Policemen, Pies, Smart Kids, the Hired Girl's Love;
The Man Who Drinks, returning with a Souze,
To find nine Keyholes running round the House;

Undying wheezes ever, ever young,
How many times hast thou been said and sung?
Yea, as I meditate, before my eyes,
All, all the old familiar faces rise;
Embarrassment of wealth; How can we choose?

We'll write no poem today—go play, my Muse!

Gets Even With the Bull

Gov. Glynn of New York tells a story concerning one Casey, a hod-carrier, who during the summer was employed at a country place in Westchester county. In order to reach the railway station to take the train home it was necessary for Casey to cross an extensive field.

One evening there was a bull in this field, and it gave Casey a terrible chase. He sprinted for about half a mile and only escaped by a wonderful leap over a five-foot fence.

Next evening, on his homeward journey, Casey carried a hod with him to serve as a weapon should he again encounter the bull. This time, however, the bull was absent. Only a playful, harmless calf was in sight. Approaching it, the vindictive Casey gave it a sharp blow with his hod, at the same time exclaiming excitedly:

"Take that, and tell your father Patrick Casey done it!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Seven Keys To Baldpate

The New Sensational Comedy
By Earl Derr Biggers

"He's in the city, he tells Sam, to enjoy the moving pictures of the streets, and otherwise forget the trees back home that grow the cherries in the bottom of the cocktail glasses. 'And believe me,' he says to Sam, 'there ain't none of those confidence men going to get me. I'm too wise,' he says."

"I'll bet money you are," Sam tells him laughing all over at the fish that was fighting to get into the net. "Yes, siree," says the last of the Mohicans. "They can't fool me. I can tell them as far away as I can see 'em, and my eyesight's perfect. One of 'em comes up to me in City Hall park and tries to sell me some mining stock. I guess he ain't recovered yet from what I said to him. I tell you, they can't fool Mark Dennen, says the guy."

"Sam told me that at them words he just leaped back in his seat and stared at the jay and whistled under his breath. Years ago, it seemed, Sam had lived in the town of Readsboro, Vermont, and run up and down the streets with one suspender and a stone bruise, and the kid that had run with him was Mark Dennen. And Sam says he looked at this guy from the woods that was running round crying to high heaven he needed a guardian, and he sees that sure enough it was the tow-head Mark Dennen and—Sam told me—something seemed to bust inside of him, and he wanted to stretch out his arms and hug this guy."

"Mark Dennen," shouts Sam, "as I live. Of Readsboro, Vermont. The kid I used to play with under the eaves—lights—don't you remember me?"

"But Sam says the guy just looked him straight in the eye, and shut his jaw, and says: 'I suppose you'll be asking after my brother George next.'"

"You ain't got any brother George, you idiot," laughs Sam. He told me he was thinking how he'd treat his old friend Mark to a dinner that would go down in history in Readsboro. Mark, you old rascal," he says, "don't you remember me—don't you remember Little Sam Burns that used to play and—over with you, and that stole your girl in 1892? Don't you remember the old days in Readsboro? He was all bet up by this time, Sam tells me, and all the old memories came creeping back, and he kept thinking he never was so glad to run across anybody in his life. You remember Little Sam Burns, don't you?" he asks once more.

"But this guy just looks back into Sam's eye, with his own cold, steel, and he says, says he: 'You're pretty clever, mister, but you don't fool me. No, you don't come any game on Mark Dennen.'"

"But, Mark," says Sam, "I swear to you by all that's holy that I'm that kid—I'm Sam Burns. What proof do you want? Do you remember old Ed Haywood that used to keep the drug store right across from the postoffice? The guy that never washed his windows? I do. And Miss Hunter that taught the sixth grade school when we went there—a little woman with washed-out gray eyes and a broken front tooth? And that pretty little girl, Sarah somebody—wait a minute, I'll get it or bust—Sarah—Sarah—Sarah Scott, you used to be so sweet on? Did you marry her, Mark? And old Laff Perkins, who used to be on hand whenever there was any repairs being made anywhere—rheumatism and a cane and a high squeaky voice that he used to exercise giving orders about things that wasn't any of his business. Why, Mark, I remember 'em all. Good lord, man, says Sam, 'do you want any more proof?'"

"But this country blockhead just looked Sam up and down, and remarks judiciously: 'It's certainly wonderful how you know all these things. Wonderful. But you can't fool me,' he says, 'you can't fool Mark Dennen.'"

Mr. Max paused in his narrative for a moment. The sound of voices came up from the office of Baldpate Inn. One, that of the mayor, boomed loudly and angrily. In an evident desire to drown it, Mr. Max went on with spirit:

"Well, gentlemen, it got to be a point of honor, as you might say, for Sam to convince that guy. He told me he never wanted anything so much in his life as for Mark Dennen to give in. It was a hot afternoon, and he'd come aboard that boat for a rest, but he peeled off his collar and started in. He gave Mark Dennen the number of bricks in the Methodist church, as reported in the Readsboro Citizen at the time it was built. He told him the name of the place Mark's sister recited at the school entertainment in the spring of 1890. He bounded on all four sides the lot where the circus played when they came to Readsboro. He named every citizen of the town, living or dead, that ever got to be known outside his own family, and he brought children into the world and married them and read the funeral service over them, and still that bonehead from the woods sat there, his mouth open, and says: 'It's beyond me how you know all that. You New Yorkers are slicker than I give you credit for. But you can't fool me. You ain't Sam Burns. Why, I went to school with him.'"

"They was drawing near Coney now," went on Mr. Max, "and Sam's face was purple and he was dripping with perspiration, and rattling off Readsboro happenings at the rate of ten a second, but that Mark Dennen he sat there and wouldn't budge from his high horse. So they came up to the pier, Sam almost weeping real tears and pleading like his heart would break: 'Mark, don't you remember the time we threw little Bill Barnaby into the swimming hole, and he couldn't swim a stroke and nearly drowned on us?' and still getting the stony face from his old pal.

"And on the pier this Dennen held out his hand to Sam, who was a physical wreck and a broken man by this time, and says: 'You sure are cute, mister. I'll have great times telling this in Readsboro. Once you met one too smart for ye, eh? Much obliged for your company, anyhow! And he went away and left Sam leaning against the railing, with no faith in human nature no more. 'I hope somebody got to him,' says Sam to me, 'and go him good. He's the kind that if you work right you can sell stock in a company for starting roof gardens on the tops of the pyramids in Egypt. I'd trimmed him myself,' says Sam to me, 'but I hadn't the heart.'"

Mr. Max finished, and again from below came the sound of voices raised in anger.

"Poor George Cohan!" said a Boston Impresario.
"Poor George Cohan, just the day before his automobile accident, was talking to me about a beautiful chorus girl who had married a millionaire of 78 years."

"I was shocked, I was indignant, for the girl is one of the loveliest creatures I've ever seen."

"To think of her!" I growled. To think that that beautiful, beautiful girl should sell herself to such an old ruin!"

"Cohan smiled his queer little twisted smile.

Saved the Exorcism

"Look pleasant," said the photographer. The sinner raised his eyes and gave a sickening smirk. "Your head just a little more to the left, please," suggested the voice from the black shroud. "No, don't move the eyes." Like a man suffering from a stiff neck or an Eiffel Tower collar, the

IF BACKACHE OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble. Agent, Chas. A. Beyerslag, Druggist, 503 Main street.

sitter tilted his head gingerly till it reached the desired angle, and he resembled a dying fish trying not to mind. "That's very nice, very nice, indeed," said the photographer. "Stay just there while I make the exposure." He counted out a minute and three-quarters. "Thank you," he observed. "You can get up, I'm afraid you have been sitting on your hat." "My hat!" roared the sinner, angrily, regarding the flattened felt. "Why the Dickens didn't you tell me I was sitting on my hat?" "My dear sir," protested the photographer, blandly, "that would have spoiled your expression."

Quaife in Madison

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 5.—Milo Quaife, superintendent of the state historical society, is expected to arrive in Madison late today. Mr. Quaife was elected successor to Reuben G. Thwaites at the last annual meeting of the society.

FINDS CHILD TRAFFIC

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Startling revelations concerning child traffic in Germany are contained in a book published today by Mme Henrietta Arendt of Stuttgart. She charges that the sale of children goes on uninterrupted with the silent consent of public opinion, parents actually disposing of them to the highest bidder among better situated childless families, in a single month she collected 227 advertisements inserted in the newspapers by persons offering to sell or "adopt" children. As many of the little ones are "adopted" merely for future exploitation, it really means a slave traffic of the most remarkable character, says Mme.

Wonder what upset your stomach

Which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmful relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's a truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

invites the attention of the public to the following statement of conditions at the close of business, Dec. 31, 1913, and with respect to the assets listed would say that in our judgment they are clean and conservatively valued. There are no past due notes and none of the makers of which are in the hands of receivers or trustees. None of the bond issues is in default as to principal or interest. The cash resources are ample and sound.

We wish to express our appreciation of the large business which has come to us during the past year. We enter the new year with confidence and believe that when the necessary readjustments are made in relation to tariff and currency, there will come a period of general prosperity.

Hot Tea Breaks a Cold—Try This

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

DIABETIC LEG AMPUTATED

Physicians know that operations on diabetics are nearly always fatal, operations commonly making new centers for gangrene, which often shows in this disease. Therefore, the following successful operation on a diabetic will interest physicians and diabetics generally.

Patient, a San Francisco business man, was taken to the St. Winifred Hospital suffering with a gangrened leg. It was an old case of diabetes and the gangrene had extended so far that the severance was between the knee and thigh.

The physician did not attempt the operation till he had eliminated the sugar with Fulton's Diabetic Compound. The consulting physicians felt it would be fatal, but the operating physician knew what he could do after he had eliminated the sugar, and proceeded with the operation.

The fourteenth day the stitches were removed, the wound showing healthy pink color. The patient left the hospital the fourth week.

The operation was based on the ability of Fulton's Diabetic Compound to eliminate the sugar in diabetics. If you have diabetes and are of middle age or over do you not owe it to yourself and family to try Fulton's Diabetic Compound before giving up. It can be had at all druggists. Druggists supplied by Spence-McCord Drug Co., wholesale distributors.

DON'T SCOLD AN IRRITABLE CHILD

If little tongue is coated, surely give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle. Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Counterfeits are being sold here. Don't be fooled.

HALF MILLION IS VALUE OF TRAIN

A train valued at more than half a million dollars passed through North La Crosse this morning, stopping only long enough to change engines at Grand Crossing. The train started from Seattle, where the goods were recently unloaded from vessels.

The woodpiles burning were mostly old ties, and the damage was slight, but the blaze was hard to subdue, owing to the fact that the firemen had to stretch upward of 100 feet of hose to bring water to the scene.

NIGHT SCHOOL TO EXTEND ITS WORK

Invades North Side of the City and Will Begin Operations Tomorrow Evening

Encouraged by the success of its work on the south side of the city, the La Crosse board of industrial education will invade the north side with its evening school, beginning at the Logan school tomorrow night.

This step has been in contemplation for several months, and Principal Thomas G. Sutherland of the south side schools, has been on the north side for two weeks, accepting enrollments for the evening classes. Figures as to enrollment are lacking, but Mr. Sutherland said the interest shown in the new school was encouraging, and that the school would start with a goodly number of students.

Classes will be held Tuesday and Friday nights at the Logan school, to begin with, and as the enrollment increases, additional classes will be added.

The schedule for the opening classes is as follows:
Tuesday—Plain sewing, dressmaking, mechanical drawing, woodworking, English for foreigners.

Friday—Mathematics, penmanship, cooking, business English.

ABANDON HOPE OF FINDING LOPEZ

BINGHAM, Utah, Jan. 5.—All hopes of finding Ralph Lopez dead or alive in the Utah-Apex mine were abandoned suddenly Saturday night. Sheriff Smith withdrew his searchers from the interior workings and the guards from the portals, leaving the mine unwatched for the first time since Nov. 27.

Sheriff Smith declared his sudden determination to abandon the search was reached only after he was satisfied the desperado either had escaped or had been crushed to death beneath some cave-in which would prevent his body being found. However, many miners planned to begin a search on their own account on Sunday, hoping that Lopez's body was overlooked. A reward of $1,000 is offered for his capture or the recovery of his body.

Here's to You and Me and POSTUM

—the pure food-drink that meets the desire of young and old for a palatable table beverage which is wholesome and satisfying.

Postum is made only of clean, hard wheat and a small per cent of New Orleans molasses. It tastes much like the higher grades of Java, but is absolutely free from caffeine, the drug in coffee, which causes so much headache, sleeplessness, indigestion, nervousness and heart trouble.

Coffee drinkers can learn something of value by a 10 days' change to Postum.

Then, as the coffee poison is eliminated from the system, the brain works clear; nerves become steady, and the gradual return of peace and comfort will show plainly.

Postum now comes in two forms:

"There's a Reason" for "POSTUM"

Regular Postum—must be boiled 15 to 20 minutes.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A scant teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water dissolves instantly.

The convenience of Instant Postum is apparent. But when prepared according to directions, both kinds are exactly the same. The cost per cup is about equal.

—Grocers everywhere sell both kinds.

POETS OPEN DUEL ABOUT KIPLING

Long Haired Harry and Berton Braley Clash with Verses at Short Range

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Petulant, apparently, because England jailed him when he arrived on her chalk cliffs a penniless stowaway, Harry Kemp, the hatless, long haired Kansas rhymster, took a bitter fling at Rudyard Kipling as a poet. Berton Braley today took up the cudgels for the creator of "Mulaney" and thus brought on a poetry duel recalling the famous interchange between William Watson and Richard Le Gallienne when Watson with his:

"She is not old, she is not young,
The woman with the serpent's tongue."

Made a veiled attack on the wife of Premier Asquith.
Kemp wrote this:

TO KIPLING:
Vile singer of the bloody deeds of empire

And of the bravery that exploits the poor
Exalter of subservience to masters,
Bard of the race that bound and robbed the Boer—

We note your metaphors that shine and glisten,
But underneath your sounding verse,
We see

The exploitation and the wide corruption,
The lying and the vice and misery.

Your people lay upon the backs of others—
The bullet and the prison and the rod,
Wherewith ye scourge the races that subserve you

And then blaspheme by blaming it on God.

To which Braley promptly replied:
TO HARRY KEMP:
Emitter of unnecessary noises,
Blowing a penny whistle loud and long,

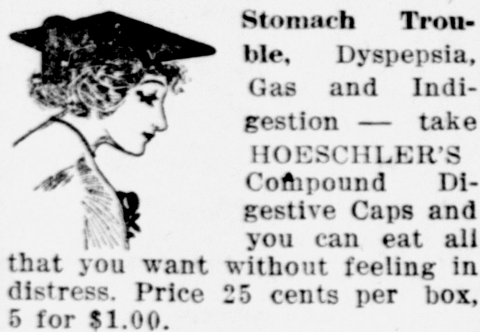

Trying to drag the blaring of the trumpets,
With puny tootlings or with futile song.

We hear your notes of thin and strident clamor,
We see you whirl in wild and dervish glee,
Shrilling at Kipling—and we look upon you

Saying in wonder, "Ocinellishe?"

Not always does the master sing his noblest:
Sometimes he carols in a dreary style.

But who are you—you cheap and tawdry bardlet—
To hint him servile or to call him "vile?"

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody can Tell when you
Darken Gray, Faded
Hair with Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—Advertisement

BIG SCENIC ACT FEATURES BILL

"Day in the Alps" Is Marvel of Electrical Effects and Realism; Heads Anniversary Bill

"A Day in the Alps," spectacular, beautiful and unique, is the feature attraction of the Majestic theater's great anniversary week show. The piece is an oddity in the line of vaudeville playlets. It is at once weird and sweet.

The electrical effects are amazing, and the simulation of a storm in the Alps is wonderfully realistic. Five people of dramatic ability form the cast, and one of them, Barney O'Mara, is the possessor of a sweet tenor voice which he uses to advantage.

Concerning the little toe dancer with the company too much cannot be said. She is as agile and light as a winged creature, and seems particularly fitted for the part of the fairy queen, Titania, in which she is cast.

The whole bill is on a high plane of excellence. Next to the big scenic feature in point of interest is the sketch, "The Schoolmaster." It has a very different appeal from the Alpine playlet, being broad comedy throughout. But it is broad comedy of a kind that is irresistible, and the house rocked and applauded.

The Olympic trio, three pleasant looking men, with costumes that were within the range of probability and without extravagant makeup, delighted the house with a few little songs and jokes. Their patter was new and pleasing, and their songs were delivered in beautiful close harmony. They struck the right spot with the audience, and were forced to take nearly a dozen curtain calls, although they refused, steadfastly to give encores.

ABSOLUTE REST IS PRESIDENT'S RULE

Visitors Are Barred and Executive Treats Self to Real Vacation

PASS CHRISTIAN, Miss., Jan. 5.—Absolute rest was President Wilson's rule today. Visitors were barred and he had a real vacation. The president was on the golf links an hour earlier than usual, appreciating the warm sunshine after nearly a week of bad weather.

Today and tomorrow are to be holidays. Then the executive expects to buckle down to work and clear up the most pressing matters before him.

It was stated on authority that no further word is expected here from Special Envoy Lind. He will reach Vera Cruz today, but will hereafter communicate only to the state department.

HILL HITS SCHOOL WORDS CAUSE STORM

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 5.—A storm of comment was brought forth today by J. J. Hill's statement made in a speech Saturday night in which he put the present day school system on a spit and roasted it to a rich brown.

College graduates, heads of educational systems and members of school faculties expressed indignation at Mr. Hill's charge that the school system is inefficient and graduates not able to adapt themselves to conditions of life.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Opton. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Opton tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

TAKE YOUR SONS TO BOARD BANQUET

President Doerflinger of the Board of Trade Urges Father and Son Idea in Civic Affairs

President William Doerflinger of the La Crosse board of trade today urged that the "Father and Son" idea, suggested here by Mayor Sorensen be applied to members of the board of trade and today publicly urged that members of the board take their sons to the next banquet to be held, probably the latter part of this month.

"The idea," said Mr. Doerflinger today, "was, originally, to make father and son more companionable. I believe that fathers should feel a responsibility in educating their sons in important civic matters. The board of trade banquets furnish splendid opportunity and I hope to see many fathers and sons there."

The eight men, now more dead than alive from the cold and exposure, still clung to the ship. Boats were lowered from the Bavaria and a final effort was made to dash through the waves to the tank steamer's side. Reaching her, they found that the eight men sighted by the blazing searchlights during the night were the only ones remaining on the vessel. The stern was under water and thirty-two of the crew had been swept overboard or caught below decks.

BROADER READING OF PURE FOOD LAW

Court Gives Important Decision in Headache Tablet Case Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The supreme court today declared for a broader enforcement of the pure food law regarding labeling of poison in drugs. It held that a headache remedy labeled "No acetanilid," but which contained acetophenidin, a derivative, was misbranding.

The decision today resulted from the seizure, for alleged misbranding, by federal authorities here of headache tablets of the Antikamnia Chemical company. The labels stated that the tablets do not contain acetanilid, a poison. But it was admitted they contained acetophenidin, a derivative of acetanilid, without being disclosed on the label. Federal courts of the District of Columbia held this did not constitute "misbranding" under the pure food law, although regulations of a cabinet board extending the law requiring that the derivative drug be labeled. The drug company contended that the pure food administration board did not have the right to extend the pure food law by requiring labeling of derivatives and was sustained by the lower courts.

SINGLE CITIZEN CAN'T TEST LAW OF THE STATE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—That no single citizen of Wisconsin has the right to assume to represent the state in a suit testing the legality of the state's inheritance tax law was declared today by the supreme court of the United States. It held that state officers alone can act in such an action on behalf of the people, and granted a motion of Wisconsin's attorney general to dismiss a suit brought by John Boland, a Wisconsin citizen.

BANK COMMITTEE STARTS HEARINGS

Few Attend Opening Session Held in New York to Pick Reserve Cities

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, secretary of Agriculture Houston, President F. L. Hine and Manager Robert Sherer of the new clearing house, were among the few who attended the initial meeting today of the federal reserve bank committee, created under the new currency law. The meeting was the first of a series of hearings.

Opening the meeting, Secretary McAdoo said the committee in dividing the country into reserve districts, does not intend to be governed by state lines. The plan, he said, must be handled along broad lines, as it does not affect local communities alone. It is proposed to establish banks in all important cities.

F. L. Hine was the first witness. He said New York being the financial metropolis, should have one of the reserve banks and proposed that this district include only New York, Connecticut and part of New Jersey because the plan includes banks in Boston and Philadelphia.

E. H. Outbridge, merchant, expressed the belief that fewer reserve banks would insure greater confidence. He said a manufacturing district needs a large reserve the year around, while agricultural districts needed reserves only during the "crop moving season."

Charles A. Conant also recommended that the reserve banks be as few as possible, not more than eight, in order to concentrate reserve banks.

I. H. C. ADVERTISES GROWTH

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The International Harvester company caused to be inserted in every daily newspaper in Chicago a page asserting that the increase, $40,000,000 on ten years in its foreign trade had proven a great boon to workers in Chicago and Illinois, and commenting briefly upon its prosecution by the government as an alleged trust.

"This company has no desire to discuss in the public prints the merits of its case with the government, nor does it wish to encourage a discussion thereof," reads the ad. "We therefore refrain from mentioning the subject further than to assure our neighbors that are well content and proud of our record therein presented to the court."

VIROQUA GREETED FUNERAL TRAIN

G. A. R. Veterans and Lodge Brothers Meet the Body of General Rogers

HAD BRIGHT RECORD AS SOLDIER

Advanced from Private to Staff Officer During the Civil War

VIROQUA, Wis., Jan. 5.—The train bearing the body of the late Gen. Earl M. Rogers and all of the members of his family was met here on Sunday by the members of Alexander Lowry post, G. A. R. Delegations from the Masonic and Odd Fellow lodges and many of his other neighbors and friends, who acted as escort to the general's late home.

The funeral will take place at two o'clock p. m., Tuesday Jan. 6.

Capt. Amos P. Foster, recorder of the Loyal Legion, expressed the hope that all members of the commandery in the western part of the state, and as many others who can do so, will attend the funeral. He also named a committee on memorial consisting of Col. J. A. Watrous, Sixth Wisconsin, and Colonels Gilbert M. Woodward and Cornelius Wheeler of the Second Wisconsin, to report at the February meeting.

All of Gen. Rogers' children, Henry, Edward and Edith—Mrs. Trowbridge—and his widow were with him the day and night before his death.

Gen. Rogers died on the day that he and his wife were to have left Milwaukee for San Antonio.

Born in Pennsylvania

Gen. Rogers was born at Mt. Pleasant, Wayne county, Pa., in July, 1839, and came to Wisconsin with his parents when a boy. They located on a farm in what was then Bad Ax, now Vernon county. At the age of 15 he began as a clerk in a country store at $6 a month, and was thus engaged when the call for soldiers was made by President Lincoln in April, 1861.

On Dec. 18, 1861, he was promoted to second lieutenant, on Aug. 8, 1863, to first lieutenant, and captain on Oct. 18, 1864, and in March, 1865, was created major for conspicuous bravery in many battles. He commanded his company in the battles of Rappahannock Station, Gainesville, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg and Fitzhugh Crossing.

From that time to the end of the war he was on staff duty, serving under Generals James Wadsworth, Lyndsey Cutler and Edward S. Bragg, and participated in the battles of Mine Run, the Wilderness, Laurel Hill, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Cold Harbor and Petersburg. He had three horses shot while on staff duty, and at Petersburg, June 18, 1864 he was badly wounded and for months lingered between life and death. One morning he was thought to be dying, and the family gathered about the bedside. His mother asked:

"Said Bragg Needed Him

"Earl, do you know me?"

"Yes, mother; don't cry; am getting better; I must get well. Gen. Bragg wants me."

From that day he improved, and two months later he started back to serve on Gen. Bragg's staff, but after the battle of Hatcher's Run his wound became so bad that he was compelled to return to his home.

In 1867 President Johnson commissioned Rogers a second lieutenant of regulars and he was through an Indian campaign when the Petersburg wound broke out the third time and he reluctantly resigned and returned to Viroqua where he has resided ever since.

In Civil Life

In civil life Gen. Rogers found time during his long career as a merchant to take an active and important part in public affairs. He was a life long republican, served as sergeant-at-arms of the state senate in 1871, was collector of internal revenue for the Western district under President Harrison and was frequently urged to become a candidate for a state office and congress.

During the last ten or fifteen years the general and Mrs. Rogers have traveled a great deal, going abroad two or three times. They have visited in England, Germany, France, Italy, Russia, Austria, the Balkans and upon their last tour beyond the ocean they went to Jerusalem. They have also been to all of the larger cities in Mexico.

TRIAL OF CHRIST LEGALLY A FARCE

This Is Lawyer's View of Persecution of Savior Under Mosaic and Roman Law

MANY HEAR CONGRESSMAN ESCH

Large Crowd Listens to Intelligent Discourse at Y.

M. C. A. Sunday Afternoon

The trial of Christ before the Sanhedrin, under the old Mosaic law, and before Pontius Pilate, under the Roman law, were legal farces and were not conducted according to the rules prescribed by either the Mosaic or Roman law at that time, according to Congressman John J. Esch in a lecture at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Esch's subject was "A Lawyer's View of the Trial of Christ," and he contended that today no one could conceive of a judge conducting a trial along the lines followed in the case of the Savior.

The trial before Calaphas, president of the Hebrew Sanhedrin, was in error, he maintained, because his trial was "by night" in strict violation of the Mosaic law. Christ was convicted of blasphemy, as his judges interpreted the word, upon His own confession but He could not have been found guilty if the law had been followed, because it was expressly provided that the testimony must be substantiated in every detail by two other witnesses, eye witnesses to the offense.

In this connection Mr. Esch pointed out that the old Mosaic law provided safeguards for the accused more numerous than do our present criminal laws.

Christ's first trial was in Judea, at that time a province of Rome, and the death penalty could not be inflicted without authority from Rome.

Realizing this the Jews "carried Him bound" before Pilate. Blasphemy, under the Roman law, was no crime, and his accusers realizing this, changed the charge to sedition. The evidence said He was guilty of "perverting the people," urging that no tribute be paid unto Caesar and that He claimed to be "king of the Jews."

The proof showed that Christ had openly advocated "giving unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's," and "giving unto God the things which are God's." He also answered that He was king but "Mine is no earthly kingdom."

Pilate was depicted as a judge with an honest view of fairness but an individual weak, wavering and temporizing.

After questioning Jesus he returned to the people and said "I find no fault in this man."

The clamoring of the people swayed Pilate and he did not release Him, instead he released Barnabas, the thief. Then, to placate the angry mob he offered to have Christ scourged, a violation of the Roman law which said that no man should be placed in jeopardy twice. This rule, incidentally, is still practiced in our courts today.

Still the mob clamored and Pilate, weak, turned Him over to the mob with the admonition that "His blood be upon your heads."

SERVICES HELD AT COUNTY POOR FARM

The Women's Christian Temperance union held services at the county poor farm yesterday afternoon. Rev. J. H. Klaus of the German M. E. church, delivered the sermon and the German M. E. choir rendered two selections. The songs were "Jesus, My Friend," and "Jesus Pilot Me." This was followed by prayer.

Mrs. and Miss Luedke sang a German hymn, while the Rev. Klaus gave a forceful message from Mark, sixth chapter, describing miracles performed and the power and influence of Jesus upon us today. Mrs. Ward, Chicago, gave an excellent Christian experience.

The inmates remained seated while the New Year's treat of fruits and candy was distributed.

The W. C. T. U. appreciated the willingness of Rev. Klaus and his choir to assist in the service and compliment the superintendent and his wife on the conduct of the farm.

FRED DASSE IS A MODEL YOUNG MAN

In a story published Saturday affecting the release of Otto Dasse, falsely accused of a petty offense, the name Fred Dasse was erroneously used. Fred Dasse is with the La Crosse Rubber Mills company, a young man of excellent reputation, highly esteemed by his employers and unacquainted with police doings. He has had not the slightest connection with the case in question.

Albert Funk, manager of the La Crosse Rubber Mills company, of which Fred Dasse has been an employee for the past thirteen years, said:

"Fred Dasse is a model young man. He has been with us for over thirteen years, and we value him as a capable and clean citizen and a steady and conscientious worker."

Jan. 5.—Military authorities and mine operators in West Virginia were smarting today under the sub-committee report of Senator Borah, one of the senate committee which investigated the Cabin and Paint Creek strikes last summer. Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Wheat had support from the Liverpool cable today, but was dragged down by the bearish feeling in the corn pit. Noon found May 1 1/4c and July 1 1/2c under Saturday's closing prices, despite the firmness at Liverpool.

Corn started 1/4 to 3/8c lower because of lower cable prices, mild weather and heavy cash corn market. Futures continued to decline in the forenoon and at the close of the morning session. May showed a loss of c and July of 1/4c for the day.

Oats moved in sympathy with corn, starting down a fraction and making further loss of 3/8c to 1/2c in the forenoon.

Provisions were steadied by firm hog prices, but pork showed a slightly easier tendency.

Corn braced in the afternoon and advanced 1/4c for each month.

Oats moved up a fraction and so did May wheat on the bulge in corn futures.

Provisions closed at about noon prices.

MAN PAYS FINE FOR SLANDERING PRIEST

KENOSHA, Wis., Jan. 5.—After a day of frenzied hearings Frank Monteen, in municipal court, Saturday admitted that he had circulated stories of a most scandalous nature in regard to the Rev. Father W.
D. Malone and one of the women members of his parish. He tearfully pleaded that he felt the wrong that had been done to the priest and to the reputation of the woman in the case, and asked that he be sentenced that he might go home to his family with the knowledge that he had done what he could to repair a wrong.

Judge Randall accepted his plea of guilty and imposed a fine of $10 and costs. This minimum sentence was inflicted after Father Malone appeared in court and made a plea for leniency.

MAROON - BADGER GAME OCTOBER 31

Tentative Schedule Calls for Chicago to Meet the Wisconsin Team at Madison

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Coach A.
Alonzo Stagg of the University of Chicago served notice today on all the non-conference colleges hoping for Maroon games by issuing his 1914 schedule. The Midway list comprises the same seven teams met last fall by the Midwayites—Indiana, Northwestern, Iowa, Purdue, Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota.

The Maroon program is shifted about considerably, notably in the case of Northwestern, which will meet the Maroons October 19 at Stagg field. Minnesota will close the season November 21, at Stagg field.
Wisconsin is tentatively scheduled for October 31 at Madison. Following is the schedule:

October 3—Indiana at Chicago.
October 10—Northwestern at Chicago.
October 17—Iowa at Chicago.
October 24—Purdue at Chicago.
October 31—Wisconsin at Madison.
November 14—Illinois at Champaign.
November 21—Minnesota at Chicago.

Coach Stagg gave no hints of war between the various schools and Chicago, but it is known that several of them are displeased with their positions on the program. Wisconsin is still in hopes of playing Chicago November 7, but Coach Stagg has given the Madison school no encouragement on this point.

from the Kansas City Federals, said he would await the return of Manager McGraw from the round the world tour before making a definite answer.

known feats of long distance smash-
